Hungry Hill today (2010) where James Luff was employed as a sawyer, as his father William before him.

On 21st December 1853 James' wife Eliza died. It looks like she died of pneumonia from which she was suffering for 3 weeks. As far as I can ascertain the marriage was childless.

On 1st July 1856 James married Lucy Mouldy. Lucy was born at Chaddleworth, Berkshire, in 1834. The marriage took place at Chaddleworth Parish Church, Nr Wantage, Berks. James puts his employment as a carpenter. (Source: Official Marriage Certificate)

Lucy Mouldy was the daughter of William Mouldy (1811 - 1876) and his wife Mary Ann (nee New) (1807 - 1898). William Mouldy was a blacksmith by profession.

The couple had the following recorded children.

James was employed as a journeyman sawyer. At the birth of his first son, William James, he and his wife Lucy were living in Hungry Hill, Upper Hale, near Farnham. It seems that the family moved to Finsbury, London, sometime between 1857 and 1861.

Continued.....

The 1861 Census shows James and his wife living at 6, Langton Street, Finsbury, London, and James, now aged 40 was employed as a porter. Lucy was, according to the Census, aged 30, her correct age was more like 27. James and Lucy then had two children while living in Finsbury. It is not clear where their oldest son William was at the time of the census. Although James was employed his two children Elizabeth (Jane) and James were born in a 'Lying-In' Hospital. Below is an attempt to explain this manner of birth.

Below is a sketch of the City of London Lying-in Hospital, circa 1771

*Lying-in Hospitals were principally intended for the wives of poor industrious tradesmen, soldiers and sailors. Women were not usually admitted to hospital in childbirth, although medical students and staff from the hospitals often delivered women in their own homes - this was the case with Jane Luff - City of London Hospital, City Road was a Lying-in Hospital with a training school for medical students, midwives and monthly nurses. It also performed deliveries in the hospital, which was the case with James.

- * Jane Elizabeth born on 21st April 1861 Lying-in Hospital at 6 Langton Street, Finsbury, London in 1861
- * James born 18th May 1864 Lying-in Hospital at City of London Hospital, City Road, London E.C.

Continued.....

The 1871 Census shows James, now aged 50, living with his family back in Upper Hale, and he is employed as a sawyer again. As their son Frederick was born in Farnham, it seems likely that James and Lucy moved back to Farnham between 1864 and 1865.

Lucy, James' wife, states her age as 46, but her real age would have been 37. On the census it shows all the family being born in Farnham. However I know Lucy was born in Chaddleworth and Elizabeth (Jane) and James were born in Finsbury, St Lukes Middlesex.
